Life Magazine Is Dead at 36

By Natalie Layzell

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (IHT).-Life magazine ie pioneer in photojournalism in the United tates, will cease publication at the end of the ear, it was announced today.

The issue dated Dec. 29 will be the last of ne weekly founded by Henry Luce 36 years ago. "Continuing losses" were cited as the reason or the closure, which had been speculated about r several years. "The patient has been very ick," said one sad staff member upon hearing

Hedley Donovan, editor-in-chief of Time Inc. nd Audrew Heiskell, chairman of the board, anouoced the suspension of publication, saying hat Life ran up "very substantial" deficits in 969 and 1970, and smaller deficits in 1971 and

"As our projections for 1973 took shape, bowyer, it showed a resumption of heavy losses and ic indications for 1974 were even more unfavorblo." their announcement sald.

The news was given to grim staff members the ougarine gathered for an 11 a.m. meeting n the eighth floor of the Time-Lifa Building

One writer, Tommy Thompson, who has been m the staff for 12 years, said that apart from conomic problems, the magazine had difficulty rith its audience. "Americans seem to prefer Playboy and Pent-louse to this great magazine," Mr. Thompson aid, adding: "It is enormously sad. We were the ast dinosaur Life was the second large photojournalism nagazine to disappear in two years. Look, its hief competitor, went under in 1971, also a victim if economic difficulties. Two other large format weeklies, the Saturday lyening Post and Colliers, succumbed some years

The staff members, on emerging from the meetng, vere handed a memorandum saying that the organization will make every effort to employ as cany Life staff members as possible within Time ing, and to help others find jobs elsewhere. The magazine said that every employee will be kept on the payroll through the end of the year. Employees will receive severance amounting to liree weeks' pay for each year they have been with the company.

The immediate Life staff numbers 320 people, with approximately 350 more elsewhere in Time Inc. employed in publishing Life.
The suspension statement said that Time-Life buildings in New York, Chicago, London, Paris, Tosyo and other cities would retain their names, as would other Time-Life enterprises.

Life subscribers were essured full value for the rune: pired portion of their subscriptions, swill be offered a choice of Time, Sports Illustrat-ed, Time-Life Books, other Time Inc. products and some other magazine.

Lebanese Units Fight Guerrillas

5 Reported Killed Near Israeli Line

By Jim Hoagland

CAIRO, Dec. 8 (WP).—The Lebanese Army clashed with Palestinian guernillas in southern Lebanon today after the guerrillas evidently refused to leave areas near the Israeli frontier. The scale of the fighting was disputed by the combatants.

The semi-official Egyptian Middle East News Agency distributed a report here quoting a Palestinian Liberation Organization spokesman in Beirut who described a major Lebanese assault on Palestinian bases in at least three places in the region from which the guerrillas had reportedly been barred by the army after an Isincursion into Lebanon

A spokesman for el-Fatah, the largest guerrilla group, asserted however that the positions the army attacked were supposed to be manned by guerrillas under an agreement reached after the Is-

A Lebanuse communiqué issued in Betrut said only that "armed elements" fired on a Lebanese patrol, killing a soldier and wounding three "Military mea-sures" were taken against the attackers, the statement added.

A guerrilla statement later said four guerrillas were killed by Lebanese artillery shelling and several were wounded. Guerrilla leaders met with

Premier Saeb Salam to discuss the situation and decided to con-tinue the talks tomorrow, the statement said. The situation in south Lebanon tonight was described by a guerrilla sookesman as quiet but lonice. By both accounts, today's en-counter was the most serious incident between the Lebanese and Palestinian forces since the army set up roadblocks across southern Lebanon to keep armed 'guerrillas out of the area in an apparent bid to avoid Israell re-taliation raids. The otherwise conflicting announcements also indicate that a sizable guerrilla force did in fact attempt to re-establish itself in border area despite the Palestinian leader Yassir Arafat in September that the guerrillas would remove all "pretexts" for Israeli border action. But it was unclear if the move signaled a major Palestinian probe of Lebapese intentions or was merely an isolated incident sparked by one of the Palestinian splinter groups that have refused to agree to Mr. Araint's pledge.

The Palestinian general command spokesman, quoted by the Middle East News Agency, said the attacks began at eight this morning on Palestinian positions Bin Jbell, Al Teera and the Rashyia district and continued

Bid to Ulster Protestants

Irish Vote End of Church-State Tie

By Alvin Shuster

DUBLIN, Dec. 8 (NYT).-Irish voters have decided overwhelmingly to abolish the "special posttion" of the Catholic Church in the national constitution.

The results, announced tonight, of yesterday's referendum were ediately halled by Premier Jack Lynch and other oficials as an important symbol of the desire for reconciliation with the Protes tant majority of Northern Ire-land. The repealed provision has often been cited by Protestants in the British province as one rea-son why they fear reunification with this independent republic, which is 95 percent Catholic...

The immediate practical effect of the voters decision to end the character favored status its ex-pected to be virtually all. But it was generally regarded as a significant step toward social changes and the evolvement of a more secular state.

Contraceptives Next

Officials were talking privately today of moving, perhaps within the next two or three years, toward lifting the legal ban against contraceptives. But they acknowledged that any attempt remove the constitutional prohibition against divorce would remain many years away.

"The decisive vote shows that there is a growing disposition for part of Ireland," said Mr. Lynch. The results will strengthen the hand of all, in North and South, who are working for peace and reconciliation among all the people of Treland." By deciding to put the repeal to the voters. Mr. Lynch was attempting to demonstrate tn Ulster's Protestants that a united Ireland would not simply be an enlarged version of what they dominated by the Catholic Church Of Ulster's 15 million people, about two-thirds are Protestant

While pleased with the margin of victory, Mr. Lynch and his ministers were disappointed by the low turneut. Only about 50 percent of the 1.7 million eligible to vote in this country of three million went to the pol's on the issue of the church and on lowering the voting age from 21 to 18. 85% Vote Yes

The results, counted throughout the republic today, showed that shout 85 percent voted yes on both constitutional amend-

Officials expressed some concern that the low turnout might be interpreted in the North as lack of enthusiasm to make concessions on the church's status. But they attributed the apathy largely to the lack of controversy surrounding the question, noting archy as a unit declined to take a stand. William Cardinal Conway, the primate of both parts of Ireland, said more than three years ago that he would not oppose repeal of the specialstatus clause. The provision was viewed by many as meaningless because it had no bearing on other Church-influenced features of the society, such as consorship of books and films, contraception and the ban on adoption by Underlying the lack of wide-spread opposition within the church was the confidence that the teachings and spirit of Catholicism are so deeply entrenched in the minds of so many that the provision served little purpose. Members of parliament are well aware of the religious convictions of their voters.

Many felt that the goal of unity would be better served by a gesture of constitutional change.

The abolished provision said, The state recognizes the special position of the Holy Catholic Apostolic and Roman Church as the guardian of the faith professed by the great majority of the citizens."

The vocal opposition was limited to a few arch-conserva-

Lucey, the bishop of Cork and Ross, and a small group led by Desmond Broadberry, an ac-countant with 17 children Sitting dejectedly in a building where the votes were being counted Mr. Broadberry said today that he was convinced the change rep-resented "the thin edge of the wedge leading to divorce, con-

MOSCOW, Dec. 3 (Reuters).—The Soviet press today paid tribute to the "three very brave men" on board Apollo-17 and wished their mission success.

In a detailed report on the program ahead for the Apollo astronauts, the Communist Youth League newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, said that it was "extraordinarily complex and packed with experiments, not to mention the fact that it includes a record length of time on the moon." 25 Seized in U.S. In Crackdown on Organized Crime

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (Reuters). -The second sweeping crackdown on organized crime here in two months was disclosed yesterday when 25 persons with alleged Mafia links were indicted for crimes ranging from drug smuggling and dealing in counterfeit dollars to attempted murder.

The announcement of the indictments by New York district attorney Frank Hogan was the climax of yearlong investigations in Argentina, Chile, Mexico, Japan and Canada, as well as in the United States

Two of the indictments charged eight of the defendants with conspiracy to smuggle about 17 pounds of cocaine from Chile to the United States in 1972

Fifteen pounds were to be paid for at $4,000 a pound and $100,000 in counterfeit money was to be paid for the rest, Mr. Hogan said. In two other indictments, six persons were charged with conapiring to huy counterfeit $50 and $10 hills amounting to $600,-

000 to resell to Japanese buyers. The attempted murder chargeagainst four of the accusedarose out of an attack on a messenger carrying receipts for airpreviously in South Vietnam and speak either Vietnamese or French, was disclosed by one of those who received the unexpected stand-by orders Wednesday. It was confirmed by State Department spokesmen. The official said that the United States wanted to have a trained corps of observers in the Vietnamese countryside to make accurate reports to Washington on postwar political and military developments.

Monitoring Agreement

They said that these reports might also be used to signal violations to the international cease-fire supervisory teams charged with monitoring the agreement now being negotiated

The stand-by orders went out Wednesday to 50 officers now as-signed to embassies abroad and to an equal number of officers posted in Washington. The men were told to make plans to depart as soon as a cease-fire was an-nounced for a six-month assignment to consulates-general in South Vietnam.

At present, besides the U.S. Embassy in Salgon, there is one consulate in Da Nang. Officials said that the State Department was contemplating upgrading the Da Nang mission to a consulategeneral and to create consulatesgeneral in Nha Trang Bienh Ca and Can Tho, where the United States currently operates major aid missions.

Officials said the decision to alert the 100 officers was a further sign of the American determination to maintain a strong presence in South Vietnam even after the American military forces wihdraw under the terms of the projected settle-

Thieu to Address Parliament, May Ask for Greater Powers

SAIGON, Dec. 8 (WP),-President Nguyen Van Thieu is to address a joint session of the National Assembly next Tuesday and is expected to request that his authority to rule South Vietnam by decree be extended both in time and in scope.

Vietnamese and Western sources sald today that Mr. Thieu, who has not addressed an assembly session in two years, is expected to aliude to the progress of the Paris peace talks, but that it is unlikely that he will reveal any details or present any new issues. His main purpose, these sources said, will be to attempt to convince the legislators that they should extend and perhaps expand his authority to rule by

Special Process

Last June, after an extensive legislative squabble, the assembly gave Mr. Thieu the right to rule six months on matters of security and economics. The bill was approved by the Senate only when Mr. Thieu's supporters staged a aession of questionable legality to bush it through.

By Thomas W. Lippman

That anthorization expires Dec. 28. Mr. Thieu said publicly in September that he would not ask to have it renewed, but that was before there was any immediate prospect of a crase-fire or total U.S. withdrawal.

Diplomatic sources said it is also possible that Mr. Thieu will ask that the decree powers be broadened to give him a free hand in what one analyst called "matters of war and peace" as well as other military and economic matters.

Mr. Thieu has used the authority he gained last June to levy new taxes, restrict the press. clamp down on political opposi-tion, and expand the draft.

Vietnamese legislative sources said that it is likely that the president will get whatever he asks for next week. The one man who was most effective in delayident Nguyen Van Huyen, is on record as supporting Mr. Thieu in the current situation and, as one member of the lower house said . tonight, "This isn't the time for

Brussels Meeting Ends

NATO in Drive to End Cold Wa

By John Mr. Goshko

BRUSSELS, Dec. 8 (WF),-The 15 NATO foreign ministers erided their winter meeting today. looking ahead to 1973 as the year that is likely to see a massive new international movement toward ending the cold war.

Implicit in the final communique was a sense of realization that one phase of the three yearold détente structure being crected in Europe has been completed and that another is now heath-

In particular, two projects will be on the minds of utnisters of the North Atlantic Traits Organi-cation in the months sinead a conference on European seemily and cooperation and negotiations on mutual and balanced force

The expectation now is that 1978 will see both of these long-discussed ideas translated into reality. In his cloring press conference, NATO Secretary-General Joseph Long abstrated a tentative timetable that envisions convenience of the secondary secretary. ing of the security conferences next summer and the start of force-reduction negotiations in September or October.

At the moment, however, both initiatives are still in their principalities are still in their principalities. Because of this the meeting here this wish was concerned mainly with the goals that the allience will seek from these ventures and the strategy will use in pursuing them. Before dealing with these points, the communique first paid homoge to the fact that West and Sast Germany will sign a treaty on Dec 21 ending their long post-war rivalry and establishing formal relations with each other.

Although the communique did. not say so specifically, this will be the symbolic set that closes
the sailler phase of delente activity, centered around Germany.

As the result of Chancellor Willy Brandt's policy of seeking a reconciliation with Communist Fastern Europe, Bonn has bornmisted treaties of understanding with the Boviet Union and Poland. There has also been a fourpower agreement on Berlin, and the two-Germanys beety signals the first success of Mr. Brand's Eastern policy.

This establishment of a new rolationship between West Germany and the Communication was the necessity condition for movement from pureling detents on a coun-try-to-country basis to the multination approach envisioned in a security conference and forcereduction talks.

Referring to the preparatory talks on the security conference now under way in Helainki, the communique said. There should he agreement at these talks on the arrangements and guidelines necessary to enable such a conference to produce constructive. and specific results."

In elaborating on Western goals at the security conference, the communique said the ministers "attached particular importance to free movement of people, ideas and information." U.S. Aims

This was a reference to one of the ideas that the United Twenty-seven B-52 missions of alliance to pursue as its main objectives in the conference. The aim, according to U.S. sources, is not only to allow greater access to Eastern Europe from the West but also to win a wider measure of individual freedom for citizens of the Communist.

This is also one of the proposals that is expected to encounter the greatest resistance from the Seviet Union and ilsallies. Despite the inclusion in the communique of the language favored by the United States, there are signs that some NATO members are fearful about pressing the Communist countries too far on this point.

Some particularly France and West Germany, have falked about. diluting the West's proposals to more limited demands for "ined cultural exchange." Asked whether differences such as this might impair. Western solidarity in the Helsinki talks, Mr. Luns replied that there is "a consensus on main principles." However, he also conceded that some dif-ferences do exist and left unfar the alliance countries will eventually go in their attempts to influence the security-conference agenda.

Separate Talks Mr. Luns also said that despite the decision to keep the security conference and force-reduction talks separate, the NATO members were all agreed that the agenda for the conference should include some military aspects. He identified these as a general statement of principles on force reduction and so-called "confidence-building measures" like exchanges of information on troop movements as an attempt to assuage the anxieties of those countries that will be left outside the main framework of force-reduction talks. There has been a general understanding that the actual negotiating will be done by those countries within PATO and the Warsaw Pact that have forces committed in Central Europe. Turning to the question of force reductions, Mr. Luns said the NATO countries now have "good

Nixon Renames Kleindienst, Completing 2d Term Cabinet

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (IET). President Nixon today completed the naming of his second-term cabinet with the announcement that Richard G. Kleindienst will be retained as attorney general. The White House also said that Yale law professor Robert H. Bork will replace Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold, who will retire at the end of the current Supreme Court term next spring. Mr. Kleindienst, 49. joined the Justice Department as a deputy attorney general in 1989 after serving as national director for field operations in the 1968 Nixon election campaign headed by former Attorney General John N. Mitchell. Mr. Kleindienst was named Mr. Mitchell's successor in iste 1971 and was finally confirmed last June after one of the longest and bitterest confirma-tion hearings in Senate history.

Almost immediately after his confirmation the Justice Department and Mr. Kleindienst were involved in even more political controversy when the Watergate hugging incident came to light. White Bouse Enemies

Despite this and the opposition of long-standing enemies at the White House, Mr. Kleindienst was reappointed, reportedly because it was felt that it would have been politically unwise to drop him et this time and face Senate Judiciary Committee confirmation hearings on his successor. Cabinet members who have been confirmed by the Senate during a President's first term do not have to face another confirmation hearing if they are re-appointed for the second term. However, there have been reports that Mr. Kleindienst will not remain long in the secondterm cabinet, and will leave by early 1974 at the latest.

Along with the Kleindienst aunouncement, Presidential Press Secretary Ron Ziegler announced reshuffling of top Justice

Department posts. Prof. Bork, 45, who was one of the drafters of President Nixon's anti-husing plan, will be deputy solicitor general until Mr. Griswold retires. At that time Jewel Lafontant, 50, a Chicago attorney, will become depuy solicitor general becoming one of the highestranking black women in the ad-

Mr. Ziegler also announced that five other top Justice Department officials will be replaced, inclod-ing Deputy Attorney General Ralph E Erickson; David L Norman, assistant attorney general in charge of the civil rights division; Jerris Leonard, administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration; Roger C. Cramton, assistant attorney general in charge of the Office of Legal Counsel, and Leo M. Pel-for administration. The press secretary said that replacements for these five would be named soon. He added that Mr. Erickson and Mr. Norman would be offered appointments as jodges while the other three will return to private life. In addition to the Justice Department announcement, Mr. Ziegler confirmed that two officials of the Interior Department would leave their posts. They are Harrison Loesch, assistan secretary for public land management, and Lewis R.

Russia Agrees to Increase Its Economic Aid to Chile

By Stephens Broening

MOSCOW, Dec. 8 (AP).-The Soviet Union has agreed to expand its economic aid to Chile, a diplomatic adviser to visiting President Salvador Allende re-

Ambassador Hernau Santa Cruz, the diplomat, said that Mr. Allende and the top Soviet leader-ship had agreed that Moscow's aid to Chile would be "enlarged and specified."

Mr. Santa Cruz said that a joint declaration would include a "very categorical statement" Soviet cooperation.

In addition to making a line of credit available to Mr. Allende's Popular Unity regime, he said, the Russians had pledged help in factory construction, aid for agri-culture, fisheries and mining. Mr. Sants. Cruz. however, strongly denied reports that Mr. Allende had asked or that the Russians had offered to market Chile's rich copper resources. Chile is now involved in a dispute with U.S. mining companies over exploitation of its copper mines.

Question Came Up Mr. Santa Cruz, who represents Chile at the international organientions in Geneva, conceded however that the question of the international copper market had come up in general discussions with the Russians. Asked to assess the significance of Mr. Allende's trip, Mr. Santa Cruz said the outcome was a "clear demonstration of the Soviet intention to cooperate with Chile." It also showed the "great inter-

Asked if Sen. Corvalan's participation in the talks had been planned, Mr. Santa Cruz seemed evasive when he said, "Wa knew he was here" in Moscow. Sen. Corvalan preceded Mr. Allende to the Soviet capital on business

The telephone company official in charge of White House service confirmed that he had been asked administration officials to have the phone installed and said that he could recall no such arrangement for anyone else during his 25-year association with the White House.

Miss Chenow, 25, worked dur-ing 1971 and early 1972 in an Executive Office Building basement suite shared by Mr. Hunt, G. Gordon Liddy, another Watergate defendant, and David Young. a White House aide who, like Mr. Hunt and Mr. Liddy, was on the Ehrlichman staff.

During a 90-minute telephone interview, Miss Chenow became the first person associated with the White House to confirm that a special team of officials there was assigned to investigate gov ernment leaks to news media.

Miss Chenow said that the team consisted of at least Mr. Young, Mr. Liddy, Mr. Huot and Evil Krogh—an aide to Ehrlichman, Sha said that Mr Young, for whom she worked en a secretary, made regular reports the team's investigations to on the team's in Mr. Ehrlichman.

Asked about the special tele phone. Miss Chenow said: "That was Mr. Hunt's phone. It was put in for me to answer and take messages for him." The phone rang "an average of once a week, sometimes two or three times a week." said Miss Chenow. and the caller usually identified him self as Bernard Barker.

"The Only One"

"He was about the only one who ever called." Miss Chenow She was among the wit-who testified before the grand jury that indicted Barker. Mr. Hunt, Mr. Liddy and four other men on charges of conspir ing to bug Democratic headquar ters at the Watergate.

Referring to outgoing calls by Mr. Hunt, Miss Chenow said: "I remember him calling Mr. Barker and his wife—nobody else." On occasion, said Miss Chenow.

Mr. Liddy "might have used the phone to talk to somebody Mr. Hunt had placed a call to."

After the bills for the phone service were mailed to her home. Miss Chenow continued, she sent them "to John Campbell of the Domestic Council staff ... so the White House would pay them. Auparently it had been arranged."

Asked who made the arrange ments for installing the telephood and the hilling procedure, she said: "Mr. Hunt, Mr. Young and Mr. Liddy. They had talked to

· Many of the telephone conversations between Mr. Hunt, a former CIA operative, and Barker, a Cuban refugee with extensive CIA contacts, were conducted in Spanish—which Miss Chenow does not understand

· She was tracked down in England, shortly after the Watergate bugging, by a member of the staff of presidential counsel John Dean and asked to accompany him back to Washington to be interviewed by Mr. Dean and the FBL Mr. Dean conducted an investigation of the Watergate case for President Nixon, according to the Whita House.

Mr. Liddy and Mr. Hunt made several joint-trips to Florida of which she was aware. (Barker and three of the other Watergate bugging defendants live in had nominated him on the platform he advocated. He also said he looks for "the rejuvenation and reorganization" of the Democratic party as a result of the defeat of Sen. George McGovern.

And he said he would remain active in the party, perhaps as a presidential candidate again, if the rejuvenation occurs.

Gov. Wallace's comments came in an interview before tomorrow's meeting of the Democratio National Committee, which is expected to focus on a demand for the ouster of Jean Westwood as chairman.

2 British By-Election Results Shock to Both Major Parties

By Bernard D. Nossiter

Parliament today, British voters delivered a simple message to the ruling Conservative party and its chief opposition, Labor. The message said: We don't much like either one of you. The Tories were swamped in Sutton and Cheam, a seat in a stockbroker belt they had carried easily in the 1970 general

They being on narrowly in Uxbridge, a suburb of worker and middle-class voters. But even there, the Conservative margin over Labor was reduced and four rightist candidates ran surprisingly well.

The largely Conservative press here is interpreting all this as a stunning defeat for Harold Wilson, the former prime minister who leads Labor. It surely

New Coalition Is Announced By Bonn Parties

BONN, Dec. 8 (AP).—Chancel-lor Willy Brandt's Social Democrats and their Free Democrat party allies announced today that they have successfully concluded talks on a new coalition govern-

The announcement came at the end of the fifth round of bargaining between commissions of the two parties headed by Mr. Brandt and the leader of the smaller Free Democrats, Foreign Minister Walter Scheel

Although there was never any doubt that they would form their second ruling coalition following their landslide Nov. 19 election victory, the talks were needed to achieve a new policy compromise before Mr. Brandt announces his cabinet to be sworn in before parliament next Wednesday.

As anticipated a joint commu-nique issued by the parties indicated they had little trouble agreeing to continue the popular East-West friendship drive and other aspects of the first Brandt-Scheel regime's foreign, defense and internal security policies.

"Full agreement" was also reached on economics and finance policy matters, the statement said.

Liberal Victory

Thirty months ago, the comfortable south of London suburb of Sutton and Cheam gave the Tories a handsome edge of nearly 13,000 over Labor's man. This time, the constituency's wellheeled rebels gave the Liberal party candidate a striking margin of more than 7,000 over the badly trailing Tory. Labor's candidate got less than 3,000 votes and two fringe anti-immigrant, antimarket candidates picked up nearly as much.

The tiny Liberal party now increases its strength in the Commons to eight. Since there are 630 members, it is still little more than a splinter's splinter.

But the big turnaround at Sutton and Cheam led Liberal chairman Jeremy Thorpe to ciaim, "the most staggering by-election result since the war." In fact, the Liberal party all but disappeared as a serious force in British political life 40 years ago. The solid trade union support for Labor insures that it will be at least second.

Unhappy Voters This is the second Liberal byelection triumph in less than two months. In late October, the party captured Rochdale from to be that when major party voters are unhappy, they put a Liberal in, especially if no general election is at stake.

Conservative rank - and - filers have been grumbling for months over Prime Minister Edward Heath's conduct. They do not like his switch from attacking to collaborating with unions; his open door to Asian immigrants with British passports; his turnabout from advocating free, competitive markets to subsidizing distressed firms and imposing wage and price controls.

Mr. Heath, however, remains supremely confident that these are temporary aberrations. He is banking on what he regards as a blindly led and divided Labor party to return the Conservatives to office at a general election timed to suit himself.

When it comes, perhaps in the spring of 1974 and possibly later, Mr. Heath thinks he will have demonstrated that his policies have produced a modern, prosperous and outward-looking Britain. He may be right. But meanwhile, the voters have spurned "promises, promises" by both major parties.

SOLDIER GIRL-They've been in the Danish Army since last year and follow basically the same training course as men. They've turned out to be such good soldiers, that both the government and the girls are happy about the project, which is no longer an experiment but an integral part of country's life.

Big U.K. Labor Woes Loom The point of all this appears As Union Snubs Court Fine

The leaders of a 1,200,000-member trade union today set course for a major industrial conflict when they decided not to pay a £50,000 fine for contempt of court. The seven-man executive of the Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers instead called upon the membership to "defend the policy of the union" in refusing to cooperate with the National Industrial Relations Court, which imposed the hefty penalty.

The union does not recognize this court, set up under the Conservative government's controversial law on industrial relations, and has boycotted its hearings. Hugh Scanlon, the union president, later told newsmen that his members must determine what action to take and that there was no specific decision on strike ac-

But a showdown of some sort seemed inevitable unless the union backed down from its continued defiance of a ruling from legally constituted court, industrial observers forecast.

The defiant union had previously been fined £5,000, with fused to join an unofficial strike. A union "kangaroo" court ordered him to give his earnings during the strike to a charity and then banned Mr. Goad from participating in union affairs when he declined to do so.

Mr. Goad won an order from the National Industrial Relations Court instructing the union to let him attend union branch meetings at Sudbury, eastern England.

The court president, Sir John Donaldson, said today that the union's deliberate disobedience of this order constituted a serious contempt of court. The union had overstepped the

Death Squads Kill Another Man in Belfast

2 More Explosions Shake City Center

BELFAST, Dec. 8 (AP),-Northern Ireland's murder aquads claimed their 198th victim of the year today when two assassins boarded a crowded Belfast bus and shot a man dead in front of horrified pessengers.

An 18-year-old British soldier died later of the head wounds he suffered when gunmen opened fire on a Saracen armored car in Belfast Wednesday.

Meanwhile, two bombs rocked the center of the city sa detectives searched for the execulioners of another victim, shot dead yesterday.

In today's shooting the killers imped on the bus at it rounded a corner in the Castlereagh district of east Belfast. They rushed to the upper deck, shot the man at close range and fled.

The victim, who was not named was the second since Britain's chief minister for Northern Ire-land, William Whitelaw, set up a Murder Task Force two days

Earlier, detectives of the task force were working on several tip-offs in the bunt for the killers of Ernest Elliott, 28-year-old lieutenant colonel" in the Ulster Defense Association, a Protestant paramilitary vigilante group. He was found yesterday with what police described as "terrible head injuries" and bullet wounds. The body was found in the back of a panel truck in Belfast.

A bomb blasted a typewriter store in Kinz Street Mews near the city center. The explosion, which caused widespread damage in an area crowded with shoppers, came 15 minutes after four armed men planted a bomb and told the store staff to leave.

Cuba Fishing Vessel Brought To U.S. in Apparent Hijack

The 24-foot Maria Magdalens, of Havens registry had five Cubans aboard. Three bave asked to remain to the United States, according to the State Department, and two have asked to return to Cube.

The incident comes at a particularly delicate stage of negotiations between the United States and Cubs over an agreement cov-ering the hijacking of ships and airplanes and an unusual blanket of secrecy has been thrown over the case. Federal agencies m Florida were referring all in-quiries to the Department of State yesterday.

A federal official said the boat was "definitely hijacked." but the Department of State would say only that the men were being questioned "to determine the full facts."

Sighted on Wednesday

The Cuban fishing vessel was first sighted Wednesday afternoon adrift at sea by an American fishing boot and was brought into Key West under tow by the Coast Guard.

The three men who wanted to stay in the United States were reportedly in their 20s while the wo men who wanted to return to Cuba were in their 50s or 50s. Newsmen asw U.S. immigration officials take possession of a rusty looking gun and a knife.

And Plan to 'Remodel Japan'

Elections for Diet to Test Tanaka Regime

By Don Oberdorfer

TOKYO, Dec. 8 (WP).-With the first major test of his national political appeal a few days away, Premier Kakuei Tanaka has asked voters for the mandate and legislative backing to "re-model Japan" in the years ahead.

Newspaper polls and pundits' forecasts indicate that Mr. Tanaka's ruling Liberal Democratic party will easily retain its working majority in the 491-member Diet as a result of this Sunday's general election, though it may wind up with a dozen or so fewer seats than it occupies at the

Under the circumstances, such a result would be considered a victory for the colorful, gravelly voiced new premier who assumed the leadership of his party and the nation in July. Because of mistakes by the political opposition, the LDP won an unusually large majority in the previous election three years ago—but voter dissatisfaction and boredom in the meantime seemed likely to bring grave losses if former party leader Eisaku Sato remained in

The fear of such serious reverses was an important factor in the party's decision to pass over several elder statesmen in favor of Mr. Tanaka, 54, who offers the public a vibrant new personality and promises new policies and quick actions to

In an address Wednesday to several thousand people in the public square of Chiba, 20 miles southeast of central Tokyo, Mr. Tanaka placed primary emphasis on his "remodeling plan" to dis-tribute industry and population more evenly throughout the Japanese islands and thus reverse the well-advanced trend toward concentration in a few overcrowded

Some 32 percent of the nation's people live on 1 percent of its land area in the urban cores of Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya, the premier declared. By dispersing the people while continuing national growth, he promised, it should be possible for increasing numbers of Japanese to own their own houses rather than live in small apartments and to have a good job wherever they wish to

The political opposition cnotends that the "remodeling" plan would spread pollution and social ills throughout the country without making essential reforms, and that Mr. Tanaka and his party are too much in the sway of big business to make fundamental changes.

U.S. Cracks Another Big Heroin Ring

Indicts 16; Received Aid From 7 Countries

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (UPI) .-Citing the cooperation of of-ficials in seven countries on three continents, federal authorities yesterday announced the cracking of an international smuggling ring which allegedly brought two tons of heroln into the United States over the last two years.

John E. Ingersoll, director of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerou; Drugs, announced the indictment of 16 persons, including six in New York and two in Mismi, on charges of conspiring to smuggle into the United States close to 800 pounds of heroin-conservatively valued by bureau officials at $14.3 million "on the street."

Mr. Ingersoll said that the ring is believed to be one of the largest ever uncovered, and that the latest arrests will "knock off balance" major international heroln traffickers

Named as leader of the ring. and a defendant, was André Gactan Condemine, a French national who disappeared in France under suspicious circumstances three weeks ago. Authorities believe he may have been murdered. Mr. Ingersoll said that since last January police in seven countries have seized half a ton of heroin and arrested 27 persons believed to have obtained their heroin through the ring, of those arrested were named in today's indictment. The indictment says aix of the defendants distributed 128 pounds of heroin in July, 1971, which arrived concealed in a Volvo automobile imported by Josef Vlenne, a Belgian tourist. Mr. Vienne was named as an indicted co-conspirator.

The government sold that when the heroin was unloaded from the car the defendants overlooked 12 to 16 pounds of the drug, which went back to Europe when Mr. Vienne returned and was spotted by Belgian authorities.

Mr. Ingersoll said most of the drug came in through the South American route, although some, such as the alleged car ship-ments, came directly from Eu-

Army Finds Drug Use Gaining Among Troops in W. Germany

The drug epidemic that once ranged through U.S. forces in Vietnam has bit Army units in Europe, with every indication the threat will worsen before it gets better. Pentagon officials say. Unannounced urine tests of troops in Europe show 3.8 percent of the men were using drugs in October, compared to fewer than 1 percent a year ago, according to official Pentagon figures. In Victnam coincidentally the results have reversed, with drug users detected falling to 15 percent in October from the record high of 5.6 percent a year ago.

The Defense Department's chief doctor said yesterday that the "totally out of hand" abuse of heroin by American troops in Vietnam in early 1971 has been brought under control, the Associated Press reported.

[The optimistic note by Dr. Richard S. Wilbur, assistant scoretary of defense for bealth and environment, was echoed on the domestic front by President Nixon's chief drug adviser, Dr. Jerome Jaffe. [Dr. Jaffe said there is a

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (UPI). "glimmer of bope" that heroin use domestically may be levelling off . . . may be going down."

The two men made their statements at a special conference on "Medical complications of drug abuse" sponsored by the American Medical Association.l In an interview, Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, deputy assistant secretary of defense in charge of the drug and alcohol abuse programs, said. "We have had intelligence that heroin is going to be an increasing problem in Europe." Other officials said the problem stems from the use of opiates coptum, heroin, morphitme and codeine, which come from Turkey into France to be precessed and sent ou to the profitable North American market.

Concentrated police efforts have put a crump in the North Atlantic traffic, so orug merchants have apparently diverted some of their stock to Germany. There U.S. troops are the primary target but German nationals, once almost immune to the drug cult, are also being drawn to it.

The Peaceful War

Israel is closer to peace with Jordan than it has ever been with any of its other Arab neighbors. Trade flourishes, the bridges across the Jordan River cease-fire line are jammed with travelers in both directions. Arab-language newspapers and periodicals move back and forth, residents of both countries watch each other's television programs as a matter of course. Israeli-made goods and Israeli citizens are not yet welcome in Jordan, but Israel's leaders are realistic enough to separate the symbolic from the meaningful. The two countries have demonstrated a tacit military cooperation against a common enemy, the Palestinian guerrillas, and King Hussein has repeatedly forsworn the option of war against Israel.

If the Hashemite king and his Israeli neighbors are able to coexist this comfortably, why do they not go the whole way and sign the first genuine peace treaty of the Arab-Israen cooflict? Part of the answer is contained in the ostensibly conciliatory remarks of Foreign Minister Abba Eban the other day. King Husseln "would not emerge from negotiations with everything he seeks," Mr. Eban said, but 'he would come out with a very great deal more than he has now." The problem is that the "very great deal" that Israel proffers still seems to fall far short of what Hussein would need to justify with his Arab brothers the startling step of making peace with Israel. Even his conservative brother monarchs in Islam, like King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, would not be likely to endorse any deal that left access to the holy mosques even under "special status," only to the goodwill of the Israelis.

Mr. Eban also asserted that Jerusalem must be the "capital of Israel alone." The geography could easily permit a future Arab or Palestinian capital complex to the east of the city center as the Israeli Knesset and new ministerial buildings are now to the westand both would still be in Jerusalem. Jordanians recognize as well as Israelis that the holy city should not again be divided. It is not helpful to argue that even in peace no Arab state could be allowed to proclaim as its capital part of a city called Jerusalem.

The conclusion is inevitable that ooth Israel and Jordan regard the present coexistence as preferable to a negotiation in which both sides would have to make concessions. Israel holds the ground, and perceives no threat from the east; Hussein finds more value in nursing the grievance of Jerusalem lost than receiving only partial satisfaction. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Pragmatism at the UN

United Nations last week in favor of an American proposal to cut the maximum assessed contribution to 25 percent represents not so moch a victory for the United States as a triumph of pragmatism on behalf of the international organization itself. If this Finance Committee action is upheld by the General Assembly, as expected, the United Nations will have wisely reduced its dependence on its increasingly uncertain chief financial backer. At the same time, it will have improved chances for substantial and sustained American support by averting a confrontation that would only strengthen its foes here.

The large number of abstentions from the Finance Committee vote indicates that many members remain resentful of this move by the organization's wealthiest member, Many regard the budget-cutting bid, which will

The heavy vote in a committee of the save the United States a mere $13 million. as indicative of a more general decline in American support for international coopera-

> Efforts of the U.S. delegation to dispel these fears would be more persuasive if Washington moved quickly and vigorously to carry ont in full the proposals of a presidential commission on the UN which said: "In recommending that the United States seek a reduction of the percentage of its assessment for the regular bodget, the commission wishes to emphasize that it is in no way proposing any diminotion of the overall commitment of U.S. resources to the UN system. Each reduction of the U.S. share of the regular budget must be clearly matched by at least a corresponding increase in U.S. contributions to one or more of the voluntary budgets or funds in the UN system"

Computer Hypochondria

The Apollo-17 astronauts are now tens of thousands of miles away on their historie trek to the moon. But for more than twoand-a-half hours late Wednesday night and early Thursday morning it looked as if they might not take off. The automatic cutoff of launch preparations just 30 seconds before scheduled liftoff created an unprecedented situation, but the problems then posed were essittly overcome by the large and ingenious Apollo ground support team. The lessons implicit in this incident have wider applicability than just the Apollo program now approaching its end.

At the root of the delay was a case of what might be called computer hypochondria. The computerized inspection system monitoring the last minotes of the Apollo launch procedure indicated that certain liquid oxygen tanks were not pressurized when, in fact, the pressurization had been accomplished manually by engineers on the ground. After the automatic delay thus imposed on the original launch, the Apollo ground crew had to figure out a way of preventing a repetition of the incident. The engineers spoke af "working around' the problem, others might speak of a sort of "psychiatric fix" that cured the computer's hypochondria, or at least prevented it from delaying the launch a second

The problem is a general one in a world increasingly entrusting its security to machines, photoelectric sensors and computers. Any alarm system-whether it be in the heart of the nation's defenses against nuclear attack or in a corner grocery store whose owner fears burglars—can give false as well as correct alarms. Still worse, some alarm systems are so addicted to false alarms -like the boy who cried wolf-that when they give a correct alarm, it may be disregarded. Analysis of a recent airplane crash in Britain has focused on the probability that the crew went to its death because it ignored a trouble signal the crew did not

How can false signals of trouble be distinguished from serious warnings? That is a central question in much of human life, Realization of the problem helps avoid the naive delusion that any major area of concern can be left unthinkingly to automatic systems rigidly programmed and incapable of that most human of qualities, intuitive judgment. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Vietnam Cease-Fire Chances

Both Vietnamese sides have been stocking up for further fighting if necessary. The chances of a cease-fire breaking down (assuming that it is accepted in the first place) are high because of the frailty of what is known of the measures to follow. If the record of previous supervised ceasefires in Indochina is any guide, the Vietnamese sides will have an interest only for some months in showing goodwill, so as not to appear blatantly to be the first to open fire. It is hard to see how the factions which have been at war for so long will be able to cooperate effectively, even with the buffer of neutrals, unless the Vietnamese genius for compromise reasserts itself dramatically. The best that can be said is that at least the Vietnamese will have been left to work out their own future without a distorting foreign presence.

Unity and European Security

If, at the bogus European security conference and the talks on balanced force reductions, the NATO powers allow themseives to be divided...France and some of Mr. Brandt's socialist political advisers are the main risks then NATO's credibility will really end. An East-West collective security system will clear the way for Communist suzerainty over Western Europe, Bnt it is still not too late. While President Nixon is still at the White House, and if the European NATO members convince him and Congress that they are prepared to make a bigger concerted effort, the line can still be held. Hopes have emerged of more money being made available—but this is peanuts compared with Soviet spending. Manpower and morale are becoming even greater problems.

PARIS.—A Herald correspondent has just sent a letter from the Yukoo gold fields. He says that 9/10ths of the gold-seekers who followed the Klondike rush now wish themselves back. The only claims paying large profits are those on Bonanza and Edorado Creeks. Prospecting, in the old California sense, is an impossibility, owing to physical conditions, and the total yield of gold from the district has been greatly exaggerated, It does not exceed $3 million all

PORTLAND, ORE.—Calling for aid from this city and others, Astoria, at the head of sea navigation on the Columbia River, is being swept by fire which, before noon, had destroyed 19 blocks in the business section and done damage estimated at $15 million. The flames broke out in a restaurant early in the morning and spread with great rapidity. Early this afternoon dynamite was being used to destroy buildings and check, or try to check, the spread of the destructive flames.

trating on the problems nearest their hearts, their boundaries, and their particular regions of the world. This trend is clear. oot only in the new and struggling countries, but in the United States, the Soriet Union and China, and it is particularly marked here in Britain.

Prime Minister Heath talks about these things very quietly and steadily in the cabinet room at No. 10 Downing Street. He seems more in command here now than ever before, despite all bis problems, but the emphasis of his conversation has changed in the last year from global to national and European interests. He does not dwell as he med

For they are caught now between the old Irish tragedy in the West and their new shotgun marriage with Europe in the East, between the power of Parliament and the potential power of the emerging European community, between the need for more production and world trade. and the demands and threats of organized British labor for higher

To See Nixon

Prime Minister Heath is very courteous and pragmatic about all this. He is going to Washington before Inauguration Day to talk to President Nixon about how to work out the monetary tangles of the world, and how to reconcile all the economic interests and conflicts between the Common Market and the United States on the one hand, and the security interest of the NATO allies and the Soviet Union on the other.

But the things in the front of his mind now, quite naturally, seem to be primarily the condition of his own people, the prob-lems of rising prices and labor demands, the ancient conflict with the Irish, and the sharp division among the British pecple, who are going into Europe but don't quite know what they are going to find there.

Before the British have quite got used to losing an empire they liked, they are being asked to join a continent they have never particularly liked, and meanwhile the Heath government has published an "Official Social Commentary" on the condition of Britain, which even the Webbs might feel was a little disturbing.

There was a symbol the other One percent of the British population today, It says, still > · Eccoomically, the British people are better off than they have ever been before-better, The Financial Times suggests gloomily, than they may ever be in the future-but the results of this increasing affluence are not entirely encouraging.

· For example, the government's official report says, while the economic ecodition of the British people has improved, the social treads, to use a modest English word, are "disquieting." · Violent crimes have almost trebled in the last 10 years, Between 1961 and 1971, average weekly income rose 94 percent, while retail prices went up by only 57 percent, but "the big increases have been on motor vehicles, alcoholic drink, entertainment and recreation, and housing, fuel and light." • There is good news on the increase in holidays, social security, health benefits, educatioo and the decline in infectious disease, but venereal disease and about oo are also on the rise. • In 1971, the report says, one out of every four bables born to mothers between 15 and 19 was illegitimate, and three out of every five "of the births within marriage in this 15-19 age group had been premaritally cooceived."

Over-all, the Heath government's report is one of economic progress and social decline. No doubt these few examples distort a study which is as hig as a telephooe book, but it illustrates os American social statistics do in Washington-why modern governments are beginning to think more about the problems nearer

The British are only the most dramatic symbol of the problem, for they have a long tradition of self-analysis and self-criticism. bot at least they are publishing the facts, unlike many other gov-ernments, and trying to deal with them under very difficult

I ONDON.—We are about to parts of the world these have a real reform of our ed have or saloons) and drinking laws. Or, to put it more precisely, we are not shops to have a real reform of our drink-

In other words, a committee has reported. It was the kind of committee used by successive British governments to postpone action, or even thought.

The officially appointed body can be safely replied on to take several years over its deliberations, it is more than likely to be sufficiently divided to prevent it from producing any clear recom-mendations at all, and the government can always plead, in the last resort, that the overcrowded legislative timetable makes it impossible to enact such recommendations as the committee are agreed upon. (When I was a student of politics, one of my professors did a calculation on the length of time between the report of such committees and the embodiment of their proposals in legislation. The average was 17 years.

Nightly Ritual

Our drinking laws, though obriously not as idiotic as those of. say. Texas (let alone Kansas), are idiotic enough, and are symbolized by the ritual that takes place every night during dinner in every restaurant in Britain. The wine-waiter approaches, and enquires "will you be wanting a drink? A brandy with your ooffee?" Since this question can be. and frequently is, asked before the dinors have finished their first course, it sometimes occasions surprise: The explanation is that the restaurant cannot serve any liquor after midnight, even if it serves food until much later. Unless it has music, that is, in which case it can go on serving drink until two in the morning, though not later, unless it has a special license from the local magistrates, and ...

I did say, you must admit, that our drinking laws are idiotic, and they are. The particular emendo have mentioned is only one. Wealth and Community

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON.—In terms of private consumption, the usual measure of national prosperity, Britain is slipping rapidly behind its European neighbors. Nine other countries now lead this one; the average Frenchman, for example, spends 30 percent more than the average Briton. In car owner-ship per capita, a significant figure once notably high here, France, Sweden, Germany, Switzerland and Denmark are now higher and others approaching.

Yet visitors to Britain often remark on how happy a society this one seems to be. The reasons are doubtless historic in part. The relative homogeneity of the society, its feeling of roots, Its tradition of order and stability. But another factor may be the nurturing of community facilities the social infrastructure that individuals cannot supply.

Americans especially notice the difference from their own Galbraithian balance of private affluence and public squalor. Britain has trains that run, and urban transportation, and extraordinary city parks and gardens, and substantially subsidized music and theater, and a universal health service.

day of what may be an underlying difference in British and American political attitudes. Edward Heath's Conservative government proposed, to much applause, a program to provide public nursery schools by 1981 for all the 3 and 4-year-olds whose families want nursery education for them.

The contrast that came to mind was with President Nixon's veto a year ago of legislation for daycare centers. The consideration were not exactly the same. But the fact is that, once again, Britain had found it possible and desirable to use its extremely limited resources for public facillites not generally available in the richest country on earth. A striking opinion survey just taken in Britain suggests the emergence of a public preference for filling community before private wants. It was taken by the magazine New Society among its own readership.

Antagonism to Cars One set of questions put pairs of alternative policies to people and asked them to pick one for Britaio. For example, would they rather see greater financial rewards for training and skill or greater income equality? The vote was 74 percent for greater equality. And 65 percent preferred more investment in community services to more in new indus- important to "weed out unnece Antagonism to the private car was notable: 92 percent wanted vehicle-free zones in cities rather than greater freedom for carowners. And 84 percent preferred improved city centers served by public transportation to out-oftown shopping centers reached by car.

Those surveyed were asked to say what they thought had made Britain "great" in the past and would in future. Among the past qualities heavily noted were sonnomic and military strength; for the future the choices were the provision of welfare for the people, social tolerance and better educational siandards:

One of the most interesting responses was to a question on trends and the desirability of them. About two-thirds of those. asked thought the development of an increasingly mass commer society had been an outstanding trend over the last 10 years and would be over the next. Only 3 percent thought that desirable. Along with this apparent skepticism about private consumption, and concern for the community, went a determination to protect individualism. By overwhelming margins those surveyed favored a policy of safeguards on privacy to one of stricter curbs on permissiveness, and thought it more sary laws" then to make the police more effective. One won about the next decade was the probable increase in bureaucrat restrictions.

No one would claim that th survey represents British opinic generally. New Society is a se ciological magazine with a signi icant part of its andience amor teachers and academics; whi not especially affluent, they would likely take a more sophistical view of public and private cor sumption than say, families ju reaching the income level when they feel they can include t some spending.

But public expenditure has go up even faster; in a decade i share of the gross national prod uct has risen from 26 to 31 per cent. There is ground for believ ing that on this small island, least, people are increasing aware of how much their prival happiness depends on the com munity structure.

Politics in Chile

I am writing to you concerning The Washington Post editorial "New Politics in Latin America" (IHT, Nov. 20).

I believe in democracy with all my heart. I am a naturalized citizen who is not only very grateful to be an American but also very proud.

I read this editorial with surprise in regard to Chile. The sentence which made me wonder about the political science qualification of the writer is as follows: "Chile is in the news because of its elected government's experiment in trying to install socialism by democratic means." Earlier in the editorial the writer stated President Salvador Allende, an avoved Marxist, was elected two years ago, with only 36 percent of the vote."

Mr. Allende, after his election, packed his cabinet with wellknown, high-ranking Communists. What makes me wonder is the fact that the editor directly or indirectly equated socialism with Marxist Communism. If this were true, then I should be really worried-living temporarily in West Germany-along with many millions of Germans and Western Europeans, about Mr. Brandt's election victory. He is the head and leader of the Social Democrats in West Germany.

If there is no difference be tween a Marxist and a Social Democrat, then either the writer of that Washington Post editorial or I have been misled during the years of our college education.

Experts Denounce Over-Use Of Antibiotics as Health Peril

-The great majority of the medical profession was accused yesterday of needlessly imperiling the health of the public and the health and sometimes the lives of millions of patients by massively over-prescribing and misprescribing antibiotics.

The accusation was made by the Food and Drug Administration, by a specialist in the treat-ment of infections and by a former assistant secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Testifying before the Senate Monopoly Subcommittee, they urged drastic reforms to deter physicians from prescribing antiiotics for diseases against which they are ineffective and for diseases for which safer therapy is available.

Dr. Harry F. Dowling, the infections specialist and a former chairman of the Council on Drugs of the American Medical Association, cited FDA data indicating that doctors prescribe 10 to 30 times as much antibiotics as is medically justified.

"It is doubtful that the average person has an illness that requires treatment with an antihiolic more often than once every five or ten years," he said. . Most Used

The most popular antibiotics include the penicillins, effective against a narrow range of infections; erythromycin, effective against a medium spectrum, and the tetracyclines and chloramphenical, effective against a broad spectrum.

The threat to the public health in excessive use of antihiotics arises from the fact that in killing certain strains of bacteria they

Two Plays Raise Questions of Responsibility

By John Walker

JONDON, Dec. 8 (IHT).—It has been a week of surprise and controversy. Surprise, because who would have expected that such well established writers as John Oshorne and John Arden could still arouse such passionate discussion and intense partisanship? Or that their new plays would cause so many to leave the theater during the performance?

Mr. Arden deals with the matter of Britain, the legend of King Arthur: Mr. Osborne asks what is the matter with Britain and answers that everything is. Both raise questions about the responsibilities of the author, his relationship to society, and one of the two, to the theater.

After six weeks of rehearsal of his new play, "The Island of the Mighty," et the Aldwych Theatre, Arden and Margaretta d'Arcy, his wife and collaborator, stopped work because they considered that the Royal Shakespears Company production betheir intentions. Said Mr.

to gicrify imperialism." The writers regarded their action net so much as an artistic dispute as an industrial one, between them and the RSC management. They went on strike, supported by their union, the Irish Society of Playwrights, picketed the theater and interrupted a preview, giving up the struggle only when their contract ended on the play's official first night.

Mr. Arden's Arthur is not the romantic figure of Malory of Tennyson. Given a rasping authority by Patrick Allen, he is a dying man, a grizzled mass of scar tissue, the general chief dragon of the army of Britain who has spent Arden: "A play which was esser-tially anti-imperialist in tone has and slaughtering his enemies,

He is presented as an ambivalent figure, a semi-divine hero who is also a merciless killer in the name of peace and Christianity. This epic poem of a play is told by bardic figures (for it is a Britain in which poets are the acknowledged advisers of the iegislators) in a mixture of prose, verse, and song. The ambivalence extends to the main storyteller, Merlin (Emrys James), who is not so much an artist concerned with truth as a time-serving cynic, a propagandist for Arthur's grandiose ambition to continue the traditions of imperial Rome in a barbaric Britain. The familiar story of Arthur's marriage to the treacherous Gwynhwyar (Estelle Kohler), and his betrayal by Medraut (Richard Pasco) is almost usurped by Mr. Arden's excursions into Celtic myth and pagan rituals. Against the exterminating Christians, he posits a paradisical myth (presumahly Celtic although unfamiliar to me) of a secret queen of Britain whose reign would end a society of oppression and ex-

David Jones's production is not guilty of Mr. Arden's charge that it glorifles imperialism. But, despite a large cast, it has a skimped air and a recurrent facetiousness of tone that shows itself in the battle scenes which are played in a circus style-trousers fall round ankles and men die to the accompaniment of whistles, whoops, and raspberries blown by the or-

Despite the RSC's patience and tolerance in an unhappy situa-tion, its attitude toward Mr. Arden seems to me indefensible. The RSC's artistic director, Trevor Nunn, and Mr. Jones have explained that they continued with the production because "with such a short time to the first night, any radical alteration to what had been rehearsed over six weeks, with John Arden's approval, was totally impracticable." But a subsidized theater should at least be free of some of the pressures that afflict commercial enterprises. The RSC, with its repertory system, could have post-poned its first night until tempers had cooled, It is, after all, writers who matter in the theater. After an ineffectual interruption of a preview, Mr. Arden left the

The Royal Court prides itself on being a writer's theater. It is presumably for that reason, and out of a sense of tradition, that they continue to present the plays of John Osborne, which increasingly seem out of place in that theater (or for that matter in any theater. They might be best presented, as after-dinner entertainment, in a gentlemen's club such as the Athenaeum, notable haunt of bishops and crusty old colonels).

Mr. Osborne's latest, "A Sense of Detachment," is less a play than a magisterial randown of all that is rotten in the theater and society. Its tone is best illustrated in the final moments, as the proceedings fumble to a close and Nigel Hawthorne, who has played a sort of chairman, tells the audience: "That's your lot." After some applaute, he advances to add, in a voice tinged with contempt: "May the good Lord bless you and keep you." He parses, then adds with fervent sincerity: "Or . . . God rot you." The sudience, or what was left of it, clapped some more, suckers for punishment.

The evening begins with seven actors who drift on stage in an uncertein fashion, impresonating actors who drift on stage in an uncertain fashion. They examine the audience-That lot of those!"-before beginning to hitch at each other and those who have come to listen to them, They are continually interrupted by a middle-ciais heckler in the front row, determined to protect his wife from any unpleasantness, and by a drunken football fan from a box, who wants to see a musical. The cast obliges by dancing a conga, and debate the point of the interrupters. "An obvious overfamiliar theatrical device," says one. "A bit of the old Pirandello," says another. Certainly, Mr. Osborne overworks the device, so that it becomes irritating, no doubt

Appearances

The piece, then, has the appearance of some experiment, although it is nothing of the sert, with the actors safe in their assumed characters on stage and the audience unable to participate because of the planted actors in their midst, the confusion between theater and life that sparked much of his earlier work. All that comes through here is a hatred of both and a bitterness of bile.

Lest we forget, the Young Vic is reminding us of the writer that Osborne used to be with a revival of "Epitaph for George Dillon" and "Look Back in Anger," which opens next week. "Epitaph for George Dillon." Air. Osborne's carllest extant play, written with Anthony Creighton, gives us as its hero a struggling ploywright who succumbs to the pressures of living prostituting his talents and settling down to life with a suburban family whose existence fills him with horror. authors' dislike of the theater they knew as actors in provincial repertory is here turned to posttire use, taking the conventions of demestic comedy, mocking them, and turning them to more serious purpose. Well acted and sensitively directed by Jonathan Hales, the play is fascinating and enjoyable and, seeing where Mr. O:borne's telents have led him, into a self-constructed wilderness, extremely saddening.

In the black-school burlesque, he is a happy-go-lucky member of a symphony orchestra. infectious, as delightful as ever.

This production, after an over-long and tenuous first sot, is gay spirited and incuriously mounted, rather better sung than acted of spoken, as is usually the case except in Vienna, when opera com-panies venture into operetts. In repertoire through February, it should draw large audiences to the Collseum, and send them away happy, humming "Vilja," the waits and the march septet as the

An attractive program book brings photographic reminders of the glamour boys and girls who have charmed successive generation as the widow, Harma Glawary, and the Postevedrian diplomatplayboy, Danilo, on stage and screen: Louis Treumann and Miss. Too bad that they falled to recall Jan Riepura and Martha Eggerib, who, in the sutumn of their careers, rarely sang anything else.

Sadier's Wells offers an engemble rather than a setting for famous stars, although John Walesfield's Danilo is likely to be remembered as a superior accomplishment in an already distinguished operatic career. As made up for the part, he bears a remarkable and not inappropriate resemblance to Manchester United's errunt soccer genius, George Best. Danile, in moments of frustration, 2275; "I'm off to Maxim's." London has no Maxim's, but Best seems to have found a satisfactory equivalent in a Jerman Street discotheque.

Lorna Haywood, as the widow, is lovely to look at, and just as lovely to hear, but she falls short of the radiant Transity and Balkan temperament appropriate to menty widows. Among the others in o large cast, the veteran Denis Dowling is opposing as the Pontevedrian ambassador to Paris.

The true star of the production, however, is Lefter, whose enchanting score is affectionately and idiometically consinuted by Henry Krips, the younger and harmonine abstraction at Covent Garden, who will be conducting "Friedlo" hear in the season at Covent Garden.

merit of simplicity, underlined by the plain, wooden sets of Renzo Mongiadino. The "horrible field" the second act was shrouded eerie mist, and the chorus of conspirators was arranged menacingly, magically over the arid hill. The ball itself finally gave costume-designer Enrico Job a chance, and he created some glistening maskers, as well as ghostly dancers, who served as background for the derruement.

was still eminently enjoyable, for those who allowed themselves to enjoy it. The new Scala management has made strong amouncements about its intention to bring a new audience into the theater,

A Tenor Who Can Sing Bellini

By David Stevens

PARIS, Dec. 8 (IHT).—The department of further investigation into the performance of 19th-century romantic music recharged its battery last night at a concert performance of Bel-lint's "I Puritani"—and the lesson for the day was that this opera, and a lot of others like it, used to he considered just as much (if not more) the tenor's playground as the soprano's.

The message was delivered by Bruce Brewer, a 30-year-old Texan who bas been singing mainly in Berlin for the last couple of seasons. Ee eang the appallingly difficult and highlying part of Arturo as if Gilbert Onorez and his famous ut de pottrine a revolution in the tenor business roughly contemporary with the premiere of "Puritani" -had simply never happened. Another oversimplified way of putting this is that, insofar as possible more than a century after the fact, Mr. Brewer takes Rubini and Nourrit as his models, whereas Caruso is the implied deity of virtually every modern Italian-repertory tenor. It is not a question of quality but of fundamental difference in style. The great Bellini-Donizetti-

Rossini revival of the last 20 years has had Maria Callas as its prophetess followed in time by Sutherland, Caballé, Sills and other keepere of the flame. But for the most part the tenors involved, many of them admirable practitioners of Verdi and Puccini, have bad to deal with the problem mainly by transpolition, omission and alternate routes. It is not necessary to know bow Rubini sang to know that this makes "I Puritanl" sound different than it did at the Théatre-Italien in Paris in 1835 with Grisi, Rubini, Tamburini and Lablache.

Mr. Brewer has a warm-toned lyric voice that hlends into his head voice, as he climbs into Bellini's stratosphere, without unseemly effort or jarring shifts in register. That does not mean that the high Cs, the D-flat and P, which come in quick succession in the final scene, fall like ripe fruit from a tree, but they are there and of a piece with the rest of his singing. Furthermore, he song last night with a lively sense of the charm and grace that Bellini demands, and of the dramatic sense of the words

Although no one else was so stylistically motivated as the tenor, there was plenty of fine singing and a lot of excitement. Vasso Papantoniou as Elvira, who spends most of the opera mad but comes to for the final duet, was sometimes technically in over her head, but her rich variety of dark tonal color and intensity of expression make her another young singer to watch. pleasant light baritone as Riccardo, while the Bulgarian bass Nicola Ghiuselev, splendid in the Russian repertory, sounded a bit rough here. But Messrs. Ghiuselev and Sardinero had a roaring fine time of it with the famous "Suoni la tromba" duet that ends the second act. The large auditorium of the ORTF was packed and tense-a rare occurrence there. There were score - readers. libretto - readers. Bellini fanatics and opera nuts of all stripes, mostly sitting on the edge of their seats as the famous vocal hurdles approached. It was an animated evening ln other ways. One citizen took loud exception to Pierre-Michel Le Conte's conducting, although declined the latter's mimed invitation to try it himself. The complainant was removed by a couple of fellows in uniform one the evening continued. Mr. Lc Conte brought the ship home anyway, and the Lyrie Orchestra and chorus made all the ports of call more or less on time.

Soviet Bond Issue Raises Problems in U.S.

By Robert E. Dallos

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.-The Soviet Union's reported plan for a massive issue of bonds to private U.S. investors in order to pay for expanded trade and investments to develop the country's vast natural resources raises some difficult questions.

Like any other foreign government or corporation seeking to sell securities in the United States, the Soviet Union will have to register its intentions with the Securities and Exchange Commission in the form of a prospectus. And what constitutes full disclosure in the United States would mean to a Communist nation revealing state secrets.

Foreign bond issuers are required to provide such information as the history of the nation, a description of its form of government and of the party in power. It must give an economic picture of the country-its gross national product, export-import and other trade statistics and a breakdown of its budget.

Aid to CIA

So, unless the United States bends the rules a bit in the name of East-West relations, the Rus-sians would be required to divulge information never made public before. In esssence, the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency would acquire, in one little bo facts it has ogents around the world risking their lives to

How much of the Russian budget, for example, goes into de-fense? How bad is the state of Russian agriculture? What is the size of Russia's mineral deposits and where do they lie? A major obstacle to any Russian bond sale is that the Rusdans still owe the United States $190 million in World War I marks in October against a re-vised September deficit of 356 million DM, although the surplus was slightly down from the year-earlier surplus, the Bundesbank reported today. In the first ten months of 1972, the basic balance was 12.3 billion DM in surplus, up from 6.2 billion marks in the year-earlier period. The basic balance comprises only current accounts and longterm capital movements.

The balance of all positions in October was a preliminary 493 million marks in deficit, compared with a revised September deficit of 822 million DM and a year-earlier surplus of 631 million DM.

For the ten-month period, the overall surplus was 17.6 billion DM (including preliminary October results), up from a surplus of 14.4 billion marks in the like 1971 period.

Sharp Experts Rise The Bundesbank said the high October current-accounts surplus was primarily the result of an extraordinary rise in the trade sur-plus to 2.6 billion marks from 1.6 hillion DM in September and 15 billion DM a year ago.

U.K. in Deficit LONDON, Dec. 9 (Reuters).-Britain had n third-quarter payments deficit of £106 million compared to a revised surplus of £85 million in the second quarter, the Treasury reported today. The Treasury said the swing to a deficit reflected distortions caused by the recent dock strike. It comprised a visible trade deficit of £250 million which was only partially offset by an invisible surplus of £174 million.

trading at about $90 to $100 per $1,000 face value, twice as much as they were six weeks ago, The price rise is said to be due to enthusiasm over the general thaw between the United States and Russia, the talk of the Rus sian bond issue and the possibil-ity that the U.S.R. might actually pay off all or part of the czarist obligations.

Jobless Rate

By Peter Milius

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (WP).

-The nation's unemployment rate, which had been stuck at 5.5 percent since June, broke through that barrier last month and fell to 52 percent, the lowest it has been since Aogust 1970, the government said today.

The unemployment indicator's stubbornness in the face of the economy's continuing recovery had been a source of some perplexity and worry at the White House, and the President's economists hailed the breakthrough in November with both satisfoction and relief.

"A one-month change in statistic that is based on sample and requires seasonal adjustment does not in itself have great significance." Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, noted in a state-

"However, the drop of the unemployment rate from 6.1 percent in August, 1971, when the new economic policy started, to 52 percent in November, 1972, reflects a strong improvement. It is in line with what changes in output and employment had led us The unemployment rate, which has averaged about 4.5 percent over the last 20 years, hovered on either side of 6 percent for most of last year, the after-effect of the 1973 recession. The administration's goal for enough to bring the unemployment rate down to "the neighbor-hood of 5 percent" by year's end. Though the rate remained essentially unchanged at 5.5 pcrcent for fire months prior to November, on a quarterly basis it has been edging downward all year. It averaged 5.8 percent in the first quarter, 5.7 percent in the second and 5.6 in the third.

Source: U.S. Department of Labor

The generally accepted definition of "full employment" is 4 percent. The White House has suggested on occasion that that might be too low, meaning im-possible to reach without intol-erable rates of inflation. It has, however, said that it expects the nowever, said that it expects the rata next year to fall below 5 and "toward 4 percent," and Mr. Stein said egain today that while "there will... be ups and downs in the monthly figures... we are confident that the basic trend will remain favorable."

Growing Number The administration's problem all year has been that the labor force has been growing as fast as the economy. In November, however, the labor force actually shrank a little, employment stayed about the same, and unemployment finally fell.

The Labor Department said that, on an unadjusted basis, there were about 87 million persons in the civilian labor force in November, and that 82.7 millien of them had jobs. The number in the work force was up about 3 million over November, 1971, and the number working up 25 million. The number unemployed was 4.3 million, down from 4.8 million the year before.

Textile Imports By U.S. Increase In 1st 10 Months

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (AP-DJ).-Imports of textiles, mainly from Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan and South Korea, totaled about $2.59 billion in the first ten months, the Commerce Department reported today, up $263 million from the like 1971 period.

The United States exported textiles valued at $697 million in the first ten months, up from $569 million in 1971.

The report was issued as U.S. and Japanese government officials were winding up several days of technical talks on Japan's "voluntary" textile export quotas. It is understood that the United States asked Japan to impose further restraints on several categories of textile products to keep shipments from exceeding oneta limits.

Overall, bowever, Japan's total textile exports to the United States appear to be running substantially lower this year than in 1971. The Commerce Department said Japan's exports of all types of textiles to the United States were 1.1 billion equare yards in the first ten months, compared with 1.4 billion yards a Third was Helmuth Schmalzi, 22, of Italy, fourth was Jim Hunter, 18, of Canada and fifth was Engelhard Pargatzi of Switzerland. After the race all were called the rising young stars

Bent Three Years Gros first fractured his arm when he was 10 and it was bent for the next three years as doc-tors had reset it poorly. After continuous treatment and resetting, the arm regained its normal position-until last Merch, when the Italian broke his right hand. All is well now. On his initial run here today, Gros was the fourth starter, which meant that by the time he went, the 420-meter, 76-gate course was torn up. Still, he had the second fastest time, 1 minute 47.04 seconds.

Heaker, who made his name hy winning the giant here last year and who also led the Olympic giant after the first heat but fell in the second, was timed in 1:46.41.

By the second run, the temperature—close to 50 degrees Fahrenhelt—had melted the snow near the center of the course to "butter," but Gros churned his way to a 1:40.85 clocking for total time of 3:27.89. Haaker registered a 1:41.66 for 3:28.07.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 ONYT).-The outlook and odds for games in the National Football Leagus tomorrow, Sunday and Monday

SATURDAY

National Conference

WASHINGTON (11-1-0) at DALLAS (9-3-0)—The Redskins will start Bill Kilmer but probably play Bob Brunet in place of Larry Brown. This game means nothing to them but a lot to the Cowboys, who need to build confidence for the playoffs, Craig Morton will remain the quarterback. Larry Cole is back on the defensive line replacing the injured Tody Smith, Betting choice: Dallas by 71/2.

American Conference CLEVELAND (6-4-0) at CIN-CINNATI (7-5-0)-They may not be strong teams but both are strong playoff contenders. The Bengals have lost their fine tight end, Bob Trumpy, for the season. Expect tight, dull football as each waits for the other's mistakes. Betting choice: Cincinnati by 3 1/2.

MIAMI (12-0-0) At NEW YOR GIANTS (7-5-0)-The Dolphins have played only two teams with winning records, the Jets and the Vikings two months asn. The Giants' playoff chances will be dead if Dallas wins. Their leading achievement this season has been the construction of a sound offensive line. Betting choice:

MONDAY NEW YORK JETS (7-5-0) at OARLAND 18-3-1)—The Jets last won in Oakland 10 years ago when they were the Titans. With their running backs burt, their best shot will be to pass and pass against a suspect playoff team, almost beaten by San Diego last week. Betting choice:

Miami by 6 1/2.

Oakland by 5.

For one thing, I get terribly embarrassed about anyone seeing dirty laundry in my bag. I'll stay over at a hotel an extra day and have my laundry done just so I won't be humiliated at the check-

While this takes up a lot of extra time, several federal marshals have complimented me on the whiteness of my shirts and the neatness of my underwear. I spend a lot of time thinking Greer Garson as Mrs. Miniper, in the 1942 movie of the same name, co-starring Walter Pidgeon. The children are Christopher Severa and Clare Sandars.

Mrs. Miniver Is Back

Mrs. Miniter looked towards the window. The dark sky had aiready paled a little in its frame of cherry-pink chintz. Eternity framed in domesticity. Never mind. One had to frame it in something, to see it all. Jan Struther, "Mrs. Miniper," DARIS.-During the 30s, a writer of neat prose, witty poetry and hymns named Jan Struther was called into the office of Peter Fleming, then an editor of The Times of London. The trouble with the articles on the Court Page is that they are all about woodpeckers," Fleming gravely informed Miss Struther, inviting her to prepare s new daily column for the Court Page's top right corner. It was to be about "an ordinary sort of woman, something like yourself," he added in that helpful, precise way editors have. Jan Struther went to work, and Mrs. Miniver was born. In 1940, a collection of the daily Times columns appeared in book form and was a surprise seller in the United States where later MGM made "Mrs. Miniver" into a staunch and oplifting film starring Greer Garson. The book, says Jan Struther's son, writer J.A. Maxtone Graham, "introduced Americans to ordinary British people who were neither dukes not cockney dustro In fact, says Mr. Maxtone Graham, President Franklin D. Roosevelt told Jan Struther that her book had considerably hastened America's entry into the war.

Period Piece

Now "Mrs. Miniver" is back, republished by a house (Lythway Press in Bath, England) that specializes in reprints, and her re-appearance has even won a comment from The Times, though not on the Court Page. The book is very much a period piece now, a reflection-despite slight mentions of gas-mask fittings, first-aid courses, and turning the oast-house into a dormitory for refugee children-of s peaceful, sumny and privileged age.

The short pieces tell of the Minivers' daily life: "The New Car," "Guy Fawkes Day," "The Twelfth of August" are some of the headings. What a warm and cozy and happy life it was, with amiable servants, a country house called Starlings and a London house and garden in a tranquilittle backwater called King's Road, Chel-

Mrs. Miniver herself is tolerant, humorous, genteel and wise. Her first name is, of course, Caroline. She is thoroughly. nice, with the sharp eye for sensuous detail that makes the English such fine lyric poets and, at the other end of the scale, such good writers for women's magazines: "She enjoyed bare trees, rimy pastures, breath made visible by frost, the smell of dead leaves and the intricate detail of winter hedgerows," a piece called "The Eve of the Shoot" retails.

Her world is the world of the timehallowed tangerine in the toe of the Christmas stocking, the thrush in a tree at Eaton Square, Scotland every summer, grouse-butts, day numeries, house-parlormaids, drawing rooms, bonfires and children's faces like pink daisies.

Jamie Maxtone Graham remembers as a young boy walking with his mother along the Embankment while she struggled to find a name for her character. "She wanted a name that wasn't a name" he says. It was Coronation time and peers were getting out their miniver stoles and . . . Eureka! "I remember her saying Tve got it! I've got it!')" Much of the Minivers' life was based on the Maxtone Grahams' life, though it was sunnier in fiction. Clem Miniver was an architect, Maxtone Graham was, less glamourously, an insurance broker and their marriage was less happy than the Minivers'. In 1939, when war broke out, Jan Struther took her two younger children to the United States, where she spent the rest of her life. She lived in New York, on Central Park South when she had money, on West 85th Street when she didn't, says Jamie Maxtone Graham, who is the eldest of her three children. After the war she married a Viennese refugee 13 years younger than she, and she died in

New York, aged 52, in 1953. She was says her eldest son, the sort of woman who to her distaste was always described as petite, subject to gloom and to periods of elation during which she would learn to play the recorder or the theoreo, study Esperanto or Gaelic, teach herself to paper walls or veneer furniture, and hunt plants in Macedonia or the Outer Hebrides. "She was ravishingly pretty." he writes in his preface to the reprint of "Mrs. Miniver," "and men seemed to fall in love with her about once a month throughout her life."

After the enormous success of the film "Mrs. Miniver" (which in fact had little to do with the book), Jamie Maxtone Graham says that MGM planned s "Return of Mrs. Miniver" in which the heroine was to die under a bomb. Jan Struther had unwisely sold off her rights to "Mrs. Miniver" but, recovering quickly, she sued MGM for depriving her of foture income by killing off her heroine, and happily collected $15,000.

Growing up as the prototype of Vin Miniver was not especially embarrassing, Jamie Maxtone Graham says. "I wasn't much aware of it though I remember when my father was taken prisoner of war I was advised never to mention Mrs. Miniver so the enemy wouldn't know he was married to the famous Allied propagandist. "It really seems most unlikely now," he
